Continuation of 3(b): With regard to the new limitation "at least one of the generating and the identifying is performed by the computer," applicant did not point out, and the Office was unable to find adequate support therefor in the instant disclosure. While the instant specification describes using a general purpose computer to perform the steps of (i) acquiring sequence information relating to at least one sample and to at least one reference for purposes of comparison; (ii) evaluating the sequence information relating to the at least one sample to identify ambiguous bases present within the sample on the basis of the following criteria: (a) scan position differences, (b) peak height ratios, (c) peak area ratios, and (d) base composition; and (iii) evaluating the quality and coverage of the sample sequence information in comparison to the reference sequence information to identify reportable ranges and sequence variants for the sample sequence information (see paragraph [0016] of the published application 20040142347), there is no adequate description that at least one of generating rule-based criteria ... and identifying ambiguous bases present within the consensus sequence information by comparing...is performed by a computer.

Continuation of 11: Applicant's proposed amendment would've overcome the rejection of the claims under 35 USC 101 if entered. However, the amendment has not been entered for reasons set forth above. Hence, the claims are under rejection for the same reasons set forth in the final rejection.
